May 2018 PRAB Report

Mayor Takes Monarch Butterfly Pledge!

City of Fairfax Mayor David L. Meyer continues the city’s efforts to save and protect Monarch butterflies and other pollinators by joining community leaders nationwide in taking the National Wildlife Federation (NFW) Mayors Monarch Pledge.

“Twenty years ago, the United States had a billion or more Monarch butterflies,” says Meyer. “Now, we have perhaps one-tenth of that number. The City of Fairfax has committed to continue creating habitat on public land and educating our citizens on how every single home and business can make a difference in this struggle to save pollinators.”

Monarch butterflies are found nationwide, but NFW estimates their numbers have dropped in recent years by as much as 90 percent or more. Monarch butterflies face numerous threats, particularly loss of habitat due to agricultural practices, development, and cropland conversion. Degradation of wintering habitat in Mexico and California also has had a negative impact on the species.

Meyer has pledged that the city will enact at least three of 25 specific actions suggested by NFW to help save the Monarch butterfly. “Every action, large or small, makes a difference to butterflies, bees, and other pollinators,” he says. “Something as simple as changing mowing schedules to allow milkweed to grow unimpeded can feed countless Monarch butterfly larvae. NFW has dozens of creative options Fairfax City can consider implementing for this worthy cause.”

The city has been supporting nature’s pollinators for years. The city currently has three butterfly gardens — at Rust Curve on Chain Bridge Road, at Ashby Pond Conservatory Site, and at Van Dyck Park —with features specifically designed to draw Monarch butterflies. The city also encourages city residents and business owners to plant and cultivate milkweed plants, which are the exclusive diet of Monarch butterfly larvae. Additionally, the city has created a chapter in the City Code specifically for “Domestic Beekeeping” and, at the behest of city residents, established beehive permits and guidelines.

Residents also can play a part in helping the species thrive. City resident Janet Jaworski’s backyard is a certified Monarch Waystation. “It’s simple to create an inviting habitat for the Monarch and other pollinators in your yard, deck, or balcony by planting milkweed—the host plant for the Monarch caterpillar—and nectar plants, which is the food source for the butterfly,” she says. “We love doing our part to help this majestic butterfly. If you plant it, they will come!”

Summer Camp Staffing

Staffing for camp is a very important part of creating the best environment possible for children and families to have a great summer at our program.

This year we have over 50 returning staff members to our program, and have currently hired 15 new staff members that we think will be wonderful additions to our staff. Among this staff all of our amazing 'Site Leaders' will be returning this along with many other key staff members that keep our programs to high standards.

We are still in the process of still hiring staff to fill our camper to staff ratio this summer but have many more promising candidates applying and being interviewed.

We are looking forward to another GREAT summer in Fairfax City!

GREEN ACRES PROGRAMS

Green Acres News

Spring has sprung at Green Acres!

We are enjoying the warmer weather and started our outdoor sports - bocce and outdoor pickle ball. Our fitness classes continue to be popular as well as personal fitness trainer Teresa who has offered Exercise Equipment orientations in the fitness rooms on select Saturdays, and is adding new small group fitness in May. A We are also adding some master class workshops. With the new cafeteria floor this month, we were able to create two lined pickle ball courts. In the future we plan to hold some indoor clinics and expand our Wednesday night open pickle ball play.
